HIGH SCHOOL GIRL LOSES LIFE IN ACCIDENT ON HILLCREST DRIVE

Three Other Persons Injured In Collision At Intersection Of San Diego Avenue.

An automobile collision which occurred late last Sunday afternoon at San Diego avenue and Hillcrest drive, cost a life and resulted in injuries to three others.

The victim was Lillian Gould, 16 years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Gould of Crocker avenue.

The girl was thrown from the car in which she was riding to the pavement and was killed instantly. The impact of the collision threw the car, a heavy sedan over on to the victim's body. Fred Wills, a painting contractor, was the driver of the car. Mrs. Allen Gould and her daughter were returning from the ball game and were passengers in Wills' car. The mother sustained a fractured arm. Wills received a neck injury.

Arthur Rickmann of San Diego avenue, the driver of the other car, also sustained neck injuries. His daughter, Miss Frances Rickmann, 21, received a deep laceration of the left leg.

The funeral of Miss Gould was conducted from the mortuary establishment of W. C. Lasswell & Co., Wednesday morning of this week at 9:15 o'clock; thence to Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church, where a mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul at 9:30 o'clock. Interment was in Holy Cross Cemetery.

TANFORAN SPRING MEETING TO CLOSE NEXT WEEK - END

Tomorrow Will Witness Running Of Peninsula Handicap — Marchbank Handicap Next Event.

Just one week from tomorrow (Saturday), Tanforan will bring to a close its spring meeting, one of the most successful in its history, with the attractive $10,000 Marchbank Handicap, while tomorrow the Peninsula Handicap for $2500 will be the feature event of the day, and a sort of preparatory race for the big closing event.

The Peninsula Handicap tomorrow will be a mile race for three year olds and upward, and undoubtedly will bring to the post some of the best handicap horses at Tanforan. It will be a workout for those who intend to compete against A. A. Baroni's Santa Anita winner, Top Row, now rated as Number One horse in the Marchbank event.

Among the entries for the great race, named for John W. Marchbank, pioneer California turfman and breeder and directing owner of the San Bruno oval, will be: Azucar, Slapped, Arson, Ann O'Ruley, Indian Broom, Regardless,, Thursday, Toration and Plucky Jack. All are expected to test their ability at the mile tomorrow, because in the big race they will have Top Row to contend with at a mile and a furlong, and Top Row is looked upon by experts as a horse to beat.

Beginning Tuesday, Tanforan will go into its final week of racing, with fever interest centered on the most valuable purse ever offered at San Bruno. All through the present spring meeting there has been far greater interest in the thoroughbred sport, and much better play at the mutuel windows.

To Walter Marty, general manager of Tanforan, goes considerable credit for the increased interest and improved racing conditions at the track. Under Marty's supervision the average daily play has increased from $96,120 in 1935 to $158,880 during the present meeting.

Marchbank has expressed high optimism over the increased interest in racing at Tanforan, and sees a brilliant future for the track.

THRILLING PLAY COMING SOON TO LOCAL HOUSE

Eugene O'Neill's Comedy Of Recollection Tugs People's Heartstrings

"Ah Wilderness!" Eugene O'Neill's great stage drama, brought to the screen in elaborate form by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is coming to the Daly City Theater for two days, Sunday and Monday, April 5 and 6.

A smashing triumph for both Wallace Beery, who stars as the lovable, alcoholic, Uncle Sid, and Lionel Barrymore, who plays the father role enacted on the stage by George M. Cohan and the late Will Rogers, "Ah Wilderness!" tells the story of an American family in an intensely human manner and with characters every person in the audience can recognize.

There is hilarious comedy in it, charming romance of both youth and middle age, and moments of dynamic drama that holds the audience in its spell.

The youthful romance is charmingly carried out by Eric Linden and Cecelia Parker, and Mickey Rooney, Spring Byington, Charles Grapewin, Frank Albertson, Edward Nugent,

Spring Byington and Wallace Beery in "Ah Wilderness!"

Bonita Granville and Helen Flint are others who deserve mention for excellent performances.

Its quaint location scenes in the New England town of Grafton, Mass., its Fourth of July celebration, its high school graduation and other slices of typical American life add a striking reality to the production.

On the same program, "Three Live Ghosts," with Richard Arlen and Cecelia Parker.

Paul's Amateurs on the stage, Sunday.

Bank Night, Tuesday and Saturday.

Ovenserve, Wednesday.

ORGANIZATION PERFECTED TO SUPPORT MEN FOR COUNCIL

Friends Of Cavagnaro And Fahey Hold Enthusiastic Meeting On Tuesday Evening.

A gathering of friends interested in the re-election of John J. Fahey and the election of Edmund Cavagnaro as City Councilmen at the coming election to be held on April 14, was convened in the Daly City Theater Building, Tuesday evening of this week. Under the chairmanship of an able leader, the meeting got off to a flying start.

A campaign committee of twenty-five was selected from the group to co-operate with other friends and organizations in furthering the candidacy of these two men. A great deal of enthusiasm was manifested by all present.

It was determined that district meetings be held in order to give the people of the various sections of the community an opportunity to meet the candidates personally.

Many of the citizens present volunteered the use of their homes for this purpose. It was decided that the first of these meetings be held at the home of John McHugh, 774 Bellevue avenue, in the upper portion of the Crocker Tract, on this Friday evening, April 3, at 8 o'clock. An invitation was extended Messrs. Fahey and Cavagnaro to be present and address the audience on the issues of the municipal campaign.

AID FOR EASTERN FLOOD SUFFERING HAS GONE OVER TOP

Quota In San Mateo County Increased 50 Per Cent—Has Been Oversubscribed.

The San Mateo County Chapter, American Red Cross, has gone over the top in its collection of funds for the Eastern flood relief. Reports from chapter headquarters show that San Mateo County has subscribed more than the quota of $3000 asked by the National Red Cross.

"The report which we submit today is not final," stated Miss Chesebrough, vice chairman of the Chapter. "Several of the cities which have not yet reached their quota have informed us that this will be accomplished within the next few days. Our miscellaneous county subscriptions were increased by a donation of $425 from John W. Marchbank.

The response of the public to this call for aid to the flood stricken areas has been wonderfully generous. The money has come as a purely voluntary offering through the banks and the Red Cross office and within ten days our quota has been oversubscribed. This is a record of which we may all be proud."

The original quota established when funds were first called for throughout the county was later increased by 50 per cent.

The quota of Daly City was increased from the original amount of $60 to $90.

MC ALONEY IS OUT AS ADMINISTRATOR COUNTY RELIEF

Praised Highly For Good Work By Officer Of Superior Rank

On Tuesday Capt. L. G. McAloney, for three years head of the San Mateo County relief adminstration, has relinquished his office as a result of retrenchment in relief funds brought about by the state's financial crisis.

Mrs. Goldie Abers, case supervisor, in charge of a small staff of five assistants, will succeed Captain McAloney.

Notification that his services were no longer required was received by Captain McAloney from Assistant State Administrator R. E. Arne, who regretfully commented upon the necessity of such action. He paid a high tribute to the retiring relief administration of San Mateo County.

HEAVY TAXATION OF TRACKS IS BAD OMEN

By J. W. MARCHBANK

"Now that they're here, how long will good times in racing remain?"

The answer is along the lines I have been talking about for many months—sport must be uppermost. One of the logical deductions from that assumption is that dividend-mad promoters must be eradicated.

The "Form" avers that while commercialism is prevalent throughout the country and is a necessary adjunct to the conduct of racing the sport should not, at any time, be exploited for private gain.

Here are some wise words:

"Unfortunately, too many states have legalized wagering on racing principally because of the revenue to be gained through taxation. Racing does not mind doing its share in paying the expenses of government, but in too many states the demand for revenue has been much too severe. It is a penny-wise pound-foolish notion, at best, and those states levying too great a tax on racing no longer will have that income in a few years."

In other words, some states are bent on killing the goose that laid the golden egg. Conditions are notably shaky in states in New England, where both over-long meetings and a big "take" for the state are hurting the sport. As I have often pointed out long sessions of racing are bad for both humans and horses. By all means never have a period of sport longer than twenty-five days.

The state's portion of the take-out in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island is 3½ per cent, with 6½ of the legal ten per cent going to the association. For the calendar year 1935 the three states collected more than $2,000,000 in taxes (the state's "take" from the parimutuel wagering) from horse racing and dog racing. In California it is estimated the return from horse racing to the coffers of the state for the fiscal year ending June 30 will be the largest in any state of the country figured for the fiscal year. The exact amount will not be known until the conclusion of the spring meetings at Tanforan and Bay Meadows. Out here the state gets 4 per cent of the handle instead of 3½, as in the New England political subdivisions.

GREAT INCREASE IN BUILDING

Many New Homes Being Built In Various Districts

County Building Inspector William Watson Jr. this week reported a decided building boom in San Mateo County, with a record of 400 per cent increase over 1933.

Aside from the building boom in the various incorporated cities of the county, the outside county areas show a remarkable increase. Permits in the unorganized districts include 91 cabins and homes totaling $183,250 for the month of March, an amount four times greater than the $44,700 figure for March of last year. The structures ranged in value from $1000 to $10,000. Fees collected during the month totaled $1240, as compared with the 1935 figures of $290. In fact the building increase is the greatest ever recorded in San Mateo County since an official record was kept in 1933.

TREE REMOVAL IN LOMITA SOON TO BE UNDERWAY

Now that the property owners in Lomita Park have agreed to this work, San Mateo County will soon begin the work of cutting down some 200 black acacia trees along Lomita streets and replacing them with sycamores, according to County Engineer U. S. Marshal.

The acacia trees, just as is the case in San Bruno, have caused upheavals in the pavement, the roots of the trees spreading in an alarming manner.

A canvas of the Lomita district was made to secure the consent of the property owners for the removal of the trees and with but a few minor objections, permission was granted.

SPORT A. C. WINS GAME FROM COLMA

After closing last season with nine straight losses the Sport A. C. team has made a good start for this season.

They defeated Colma last Saturday by a score 9 to 5 in a game of many errors on the part of both teams. At the end of the first inning it looked as though the Sport A. C. would win it easily, but Colma came back fighting only to lose by a score of 9 to 5.

The Sport A. C. used three pitchers —Leggetti, White and Johnson—who also were the hitting stars, each getting two hits. Colma used "Pooch" Dante, who was by far the most outstanding player on the Colma team, but a few costly errors behind him accounted for a few runs for the winners.

The score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Colma	0	0	0	0	1	1	0	2	1	— 5

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, a pleasant, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a terrific rain storm. He makes himself at home. Six years ago his father had died in China, leaving the lad, Barry Gilbert, to fight his way back to the States. He did not recollect ever having had a mother. Dozing at the fireside, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts; a chauffeur, Evans; a cook and a maid. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out.

"I hope not," the Duke replied, grinning broadly, and, seeing that grin, the four servants smiled, too—plainly surprised at the master's good humor.

"This is Evans, sir," the butler continued. "This is Mrs. Mulligan. Cook, sir. And Annie Jeffers, the parlor maid. If you don't mind, sir, I'll get them set, and then I'll come upstairs to report."

"Fine!" said the Duke, calculating that five minutes would get him into his clothes, and out the front door.

He was climbing the steps again when Willetts called.

"I never thought, sir. Your bed isn't made. I'll get the linen out, and have Annie up there right away. You'll want a good fire in your room to dry things out."

"I've got a fire in the library," the Duke replied. "Don't hurry. I'm very comfortable."

They did hurry. He had scarcely got his trousers from under the mattress when Annie appeared, just as he had seen her in the hall, and with a small load of immaculate sheets and pillow cases.

"Mr. Evans is lighting the furnace," she said. "The house is that cold. It's an oil-burner, Mr. Willetts says. I wonder you didn't think of it. But, of course, you're a stranger here, too."

"A stranger!" What did she mean by that? Where had be been, he wondered? Evidently, not home, at any rate. So that was why Willetts hadn't known he wasn't Mr. Ridder. Was Willetts new? The girl was on her knees at the hearth, and the Duke ventured half a question.

"Willetts isn't a stranger?"

"Of course not," Annie replied. "Nor Mr. Evans. Just Mrs. Mulligan and me. We was taken on when Madam and Mr. Ridder expected to spend the summer here, and we'd've been let out, I guess, when they decided to go to Germany, if it hadn't been for your coming back."

"And "You sure did!" grinned the parlor maid, spreading the linen over the arms of two chairs.

It was an amusing conversation, but it had been too long. Returning to the library, trousers still in hand, Barry Gilbert encountered the ubiquitous Willetts. "I'll take those, sir," said the butler, taking them.

"Oh, never mind!"

"They'll need pressing."

"I'll need them."

"They'll be ready for you in the morning," Willetts said, with a note of finality. "Did you bring any pyjamas, sir?"

Any lie would do for now.

"Yes," answered the Duke, "but, like an idiot, I checked my suit-case, and God knows what happened to the check!"

"I'll get you a pair of your father's," Willetts voluntered. "You're very much of a size." He was taking stock of the new master. "Look like your father, if you don't mind my saying so, sir. Same figure. Same kind of face, only kinder, if you don't mind my saying so, sir."

The Duke didn't mind. It was all "a lucky break," only — how long would it last? "Mustn't over-play my luck," thought the Duke. But the real Mr. Ridder "wasn't coming until tomorrow." Why make a break for it tonight? The storm was roaring, and throwing buckets of water against the windows.

The butler had gone into the bedroom, and returned with a pair of purple silk pyjamas.

"Anything else, sir?"

"No, thanks."

"I'll be leaving you then. There's a lot to do—getting the rooms ready for cook and the maid. They've never been here before. Don't know their way about. Evans don't neither. What time breakfast, sir?"

"Oh, say eight o'clock."

"Easy!" thought the Duke, standing before the fire, with the purple pyjamas in his hand. "Too easy! Too damned easy! There's a catch in it somewhere!"

Willetts implied that he had been with the family some time. Why had he never seen the son? Or even a picture of him? Why was he so willing to accept a stranger in the house at his own word—practically without question? Why did he take those trousers? "I'm trapped," mused the Duke, "or else—"

Or else what?

"Or else he's no more a butler than I am Mr. Ridder. How do I know what he is? There's a lot of mighty valuable junk in this house."

It was with that thought in his mind, and himself imagined in a new and exciting role, that His Grace of Hollywood finally turned the other cheek on an Irish linen pillow slip, and dropped off to sleep.

The trousers were beside his bed when he awoke.

And all that cinema nonsense had evaporated from his mind.

Just "a lucky break." A good night's rest in a warm, dry house, whose owners had suddenly dashed off to Europe, leaving the establishment to a son who happened to be unknown to the servants.

"If I belonged in a house like this—"

He squared his shoulders, and sauntered down the carpeted stairs. No need of finishing the sentence. Already, he felt a new dignity; a new, stiffening self-respect. The trousers were neatly pressed, and "Good morning, sir," said the butler, as he entered the breakfast room.

There was nothing "make shift" about the meal. Evans had been to town for cream, and bacon, and bread, and the Duke's courage rose with every sip of the steaming coffee.

"A letter for your mother, sir," Willetts replied. "It came after she'd left the hotel, and Evans got it when he went back for some things he was to bring out here. He forgot it last night, sir. Mrs. Ridder expected some mail from the employment agency, and places like that. She said you was to open it, sir."

Barry hesitated.

He could feel a chilly something in the butler's gaze.

Sooner than return the gaze, or evade it, he opened the envelope.

A hundred dollar bill dropped out.

"Well, sir!" exclaimed the butler, any doubts he may have entertained lost in his surprise.

"Well," echoed the Duke, with that new courage born of the steaming coffee. "Well, and likewise good. I can use this."

"Yes, sir," said the butler. "A little more coffee, sir?"

"Thank you," assented the Duke "And just one more piece of toast."

Alone in the cheerful breakfast room, with the cheerful sunshine streaming down outside, he read the letter.

"Dear Mother:

I'm returning the money. I can't keep it, and I can't go to Southampton. I'm sending this special delivery, so you'll have time to get rid of the servants, if you decide not to open the house. For your sake, I hope father improves at Bad Nauheim, but I don't want anything that comes from him, and I sha'n't write again. Thanks, all the same. John."

The Duke picked up the envelope again.

It had been posted the previous morning in New York, and there was no special delivery stamp.

Back with the toast and coffee, Willetts inquired, "Anything important, sir?"

"The letter?" asked the Duke, as though that had been farthest from his present thoughts. "No. I'll send it to Bad Nauheim when I write, and keep the money until my mother returns."

"What time shall you want the car, sir?"

"The car?"

"For luncheon, sir. It's a fairish long walk to the village."

His Grace reflected. It was a long walk to the village. It was an even longer walk to Montauk Point. And, apparently, there was no possibility of overplaying his luck. Why should not he ride to Montauk in comfort—or, at least, to within a few miles of Montauk — and disappear there, instead of at Southampton?

"I might take a drive," he said.

Out of sight of the house, he took the precaution of burning that letter from "John." The truth was that the Duke's uneasiness over that hundred had nothing to do with the fear of being caught. He had never stolen anything before. "I'll return that money from Montauk," mused the Duke. "I don't want to be hooked for robbing the mails."

Life had never been dull for him—or for his father. "Keep moving"—that was the old man's slogan. And that was all he ever kept. Barry's memories began in Pittsburg. Stranded, Francis Gilbert had tutored there. "Spoiling good longshoremen," he called it, "because their papas are rich." From one of the longshoremen, Barry had discovered that he should have a mother. The old man had never mentioned it, so his son raised the question. "I lost her," his father said.

"How?"

"In Algiers. You were born there."

It was years before Barry was old enough to put the two things together. "Did she die when I was born?" he asked then, and got no answer. This was in San Sebastian, where the old man worked for an engineering concern. Soon afterward, they pushed on to England, and short-lived prosperity. Barry went to school, for the first time, and found that he had learned more from his father than the other lads from their professors. That was fortunate, because the schooling lasted only a year before Barry—fifteen now—was taken to India. "I can't stand counting houses," his father had told him. "They've given us a berth in Calcutta."

It wasn't an upper berth, and it was in another counting house. "I met a fellow today," the elder Gilbert announced, "who's got something to do with the diamond mines. I think we'll go to Johannesburg." They didn't, because, a week later, the old man found another friend who suggested Manila. From there, it was only a step to Canton, and the tea business, and a shorter step to Hong Kong, where Francis Gilbert came home one night with a fever, and died the next morning.

Barry had begged a clerkship in Hong Kong, and then worked his way to San Francisco. On the boat was a movie director. "You've got a great smile," he told the youngster. "I think I can use you." Hollywood, then, and one studio after another. Youth, and looks, and the ingratiating grin helped a lot there. And Barry learned a lot, too. How to wear clothes, and how gentlemen behaved—or Hollywood thought they behaved—in a drawing room. He was earning two hundred dollars a week, sometimes, when a wallet vanished from a coat thrown over a table "in the set." The Duke knew who took it. She was a poor little thing, though, and desperate, and His Grace kept his mouth shut. They couldn't pin it on him, he said, and they didn't, but there were no jobs after that.

And so he'd come East. Ankle-deep in the sand, that morning at Southampton, he kept thinking of the letter he'd just burned. And of his own mother. He had missed her all through his childhood, watching the other boys with their mothers, or, at school in England, getting ready to go home to them. "I lost her," the old man had said, and never mentioned the matter again. Had she died in Algiers, in childbirth, or merely grown weary of wandering, and decided to stay somewhere with someone? "I'd like to find her," the Duke thought.

At noon Evans brought the car.

"Do you know where we're going?" asked the Duke.

"Yes. I'm taking you for a ride."

Almost surly, thought the Duke. And it had a sinister sound, that phrase.

"You want to get lunch, don't you?" the chauffeur added, quickly.

"I want to see the end of the island. We can eat anywhere."

The Duke sank back into the cushioned seat. It gave him a curious sense of importance — being driven like this. Along the highway they sped.

The car was slowing down now, and, looking ahead, His Grace saw another limousine drawn up at the side of the road. Evans threw out the clutch, and then put his foot on the brake.

A husky young fellow in uniform was standing in front of the other car. Beside him was a spare, white-haired gentleman. And, framed in the car's doorway, ready to alight, stood a pretty girl.

"Stop," said the Duke, quite supererogatorily, since they had stopped.

She was the prettiest girl he had ever seen, the Duke decided. He had made the same decision many times before, but this time he felt it would be final. Tall and slim and dark, dressed in an ensemble of hunter's-green tweed, with a top coat to match, and a tiny felt hat perched upon her sleek black hair, she looked, somehow, like a thing turned out by an entirely perfect machine—trim, and polished, and built for speed. Her eyes were gray, the Duke was to discover later, and wide, and a little cold. Her nose was a straight line from her forehead, and her lips were bright red against the pale ivory of her face.

"Can I do anything for you?" inquired the Duke.

He was standing before her now, and her glance took him in, calmly, appraisingly, before she answered, "No, thanks."

And with that, Barry felt, she erased him from the landscape.

"Yes, you can," said the white-haired gentleman. "That is, if either of you knows anything about a car. My chauffeur doesn't."

"We'll be glad to try," the Duke said, cordially. "Have a look at it, will you, Evans?"

Sullenly, Evans walked over to the open hood.

"It's the ignition," the other chauffeur told him.

"Start her up."

"She won't start."

The two men began fussing with the engine.

"It's got to go," fumed the white-haired gentleman. "I haven't had a bite since breakfast, and I'm due in New York at five o'clock."

"Hungry myself," said the Duke. "Where did you mean to eat?"

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Perhaps a great violinist is to be excused for thinking or talking more about music than about anything else. It may be that an inventor is entitled to bore his friends and acquaintances by conversing about his hobby day in and day out.

Lopsided Tongues

But such people are geniuses and therefore exceptions.

However, the person who talks shop and thinks shop constantly soon becomes a nuisance. He leads a lopsided life.

He is a burden to everybody with whom he comes into contact.

You may be "hipped" on your calling, but don't think that other people are.

A person's knowledge of his own trade is enhanced by general information and by outside reading.

If he can talk with some degree of intelligence about matters that are of interest to those whom he is speaking to he will cease to be a bore, and become good company.

A boy with a new job may be excused for harping on it.

But a man who can think of only one thing—his own profession or business, and brings it up at every opportunity is by way of being a pest.

* * *

If you want to be "good company" and who does not, listen considerably more than you speak, and speak as little as possible about your own vocation and its difficulties and delights, and the progress you are making in it.

Talk shop, if you must to your shop mates, but even they deserve and will appreciate a rest from the same old topics, discussed in the same old way.

General conversation, if conducted intelligently, is stimulating and profitable.

An exchange of views and ideas is a stimulant to anyone who is not a loquacious egoist who is never happy unless he is doing all the talking himself.

* * *

Learn to talk convincingly, but sparingly.

If your views are asked for, give them.

But beware of being a chatterbox, whose only speech concerns your only little circle of ideas, and who is never satisfied unless all the talking is done by one tongue, when there are so many other tongues which are eager to be employed.

Talking is an art, if well done.

It is a difficult art, but practice it for a while and you will find that it was well worth all the trouble you took to cultivate it.

The early settlers in America continued to suffer from raids by the Indians till they and their wives and children were in fear of their lives.

Why Crooks Prosper

The result was the Pequot Massacre. It was a hideous thing, but it put an end to fright in New England for a long time.

The honest and decent people in this country outnumber the crooks many hundred to one.

But the crooks are organized. Moreover they are as a rule marked men and when cornered they know that they must fight for their lives or die.

The people whom they victimize read of a gunman massacre in the newspaper and say aloud or to themselves, "Something ought to be done about this atrocity," and then turn the newspaper over to the stock market column or the news from Washington or the yacht race.

* * *

There is no organized crime in this country which could not be stopped in six months if the people realized what it meant, and made up their minds that a stop must be put to it.

The depredations of organized crowds of murderers and robbers and yeggmen in New York would be ended in a few weeks if those who read about them took the trouble to think what it means to the people of a great city to be victims, or innocent bystanders at a shooting spree.

We are as a race and as a nation unthinking and heedless.

Things happen too fast among us, and are so interesting and exciting while they are going on that they do not sink very deep.

But if the population of the city could be lined up along Fifth avenue and shown a gang raid or a bomb throwing battle, there would be no more of that sort of thing for a long, long time to come.

* * *

Once let citizens of New York or any other city picture to themselves what a menace is organized crime—including graft, and that would be about all.

In the West it was necessary to organize vigilance committees when desperadoes began to make trouble.

The committee armed its members, sent them out to put an end to the peril of banditry, and that was that.

As a nation we lack imagination. Not till we correct that fault will outlaws have their own way, and make a success of the criminal business.

How soon it will be I have no guess. But unless the criminals abate their present activity, it will be very soon, in my opinion.

Avignon, Walled City of the French Popes, Loses Prestige

Has Shrunk in Size and Fame Since 14th Century.

Avignon, ancient stronghold of the popes in southern France, was flooded recently by the river Rhone, on whose left bank it is situated about 30 miles from the Mediterranean. Floods have damaged the city before, frequently causing breaches in its encircling walls.

"Avignon, capital of the Department of Vaucluse, has shrunk in both size and fame since the Fourteenth century, when, during the residence of seven French popes, it was the focus of all Christendom, crowded with approximately 80,000 inhabitants," says the National Geographic society.

The Vatican in France.

"From about 1309 to 1376 Avignon replaced Rome as the papal capital. The massive Papal palace covers three and one-half acres on a rocky hill nearly 200 feet high. Outwardly it was a grim fortress, with high walls 13 feet thick in places, and huge towers from which molten lead could be poured on attackers. Within, however, it was a luxurious edifice.

"In medieval days the palace was decorated with gold and azure frescoes, hung with gorgeous tapestries, and contained a treasury of jewels and precious vessels. Here popes and cardinals in ermine and brocade dined with forks of gold and mother-of-pearl, and knives with handles of jasper and ivory. In the lovely gardens, white peacocks strolled between clipped hedges and flower beds, and caged lions and other beasts glowered at pacing dignitaries.

"North of the palace on the huge rock, Rocher des Doms, stands the gloomy Romanesque edifice, Notre Dame des Doms, for 70 years the premier church of Christendom and sometimes called 'the St. Peter's of Avignon.'

"Behind the cathedral, a promenade leads to the edge of the cliff, from which one may look down on the red and brown tile roofs huddled below, and on the willow-fringed blue Rhone winding through a fertile plain green with mulberry trees, vineyards and gardens.

Avignon a Walled City.

"Continuing the natural fortifications of the cliff, and practically encircling Avignon, are three miles of massive crenellated walls, built in the Fourteenth century to keep out bands of roving brigands. They are intercepted by 39 towers and numerous gates. As modern Avignon expanded beyond the walls, involving new openings, officials threatened to remove the broken-down portions. But intervention of public-spirited citizens saved the remnants for posterity.

"During the papal occupation, Avignon flourished. Following on the heels of popes and church dignitaries, came Italian artists to decorate the palace; Italian bankers, and throngs of merchants to market their wares to a wealthy court. Into the city poured grain and wine from Provence, and rich cloth and tapestries from Bruges and Tournai.

"Today, on the east bank of the Rhone, 143 miles south of Lyon, Avignon is still the market town for the country east of the river, just as turreted Villeneuve, on the opposite bank of the Rhone is a trade center for the west side.

"A suspension bridge joins the two cities. During the Middle ages they were united by a stone bridge of 22 arches, built in 1177-1185. Damaged by battles and by floods and ice-floes of the Rhone, the arches kept collapsing until at present only four remain standing."

We're Debunked Again: Busy Jocko Doesn't Hunt Vermin

Monkeys have been much maligned. When they go over each other's fur in their cage, occasionally nipping something between their front teeth, they aren't hunting for what you think they're hunting for. So says Dr. H. E. Ewing, entomologist of the United States National museum, in the Journal of Mammalogy, and he backs up his opinion with the agreement of several fellow scientists. Monkeys given the ability to keep clean are highly unlikely to be verminous, the zoologists declare.

But if that isn't what they're after, what are they hunting for? Doctor Ewing made some close observations and a few experiments. In the end it settled down to just hairs. When Jocko finds a loose (or perhaps just a loosening) hair on his mate's back he plucks it out—and nibbles it up.

PEOPLES FORUM

Opinions Of Citizens For Which The Editor Gives No Sponsorship

THINKS IT IS THE SAME MOLDY GAG

As the Municipal Election to be held on April the 14th draws closer the veil lifts and the political picture becomes clearer. We have in the field the following candidates: John J. Fahey (incumbent); Edmund Cavagnaro; George Wheeler; A. J. Gaggero and F. P. Callsen.

There is now no doubt Callsen and Gaggero were introduced by the Smith regime which has ruthlessly controlled Daly City politics for many years past, while Fahey and Cavagnaro are supported by the liberal element which believes that the general public is entitled to fair and responsible representation rather than a dictatorship. Evidently Mr. Smith has seen that his personal case was beyond redemption, and that it would be impossible for him to be re-elected, and, therefore, he has put these two men in the field to take the fall for him. In other words he will maintain his position as boss if he is able to delude the people into voting for his stand-ins, while he has not the courage to risk the ignominy of a personal defeat.

If Fahey is returned to the Board and Cavagnaro elected the effect will be to double the restraining or braking power of the minority members upon the majority faction. In years past, almost without exception, the vote of the City Council upon controversial matters coming before them has been 4 to 1. It would be difficult to conceive of four men of sufficient intelligence to hold the office of City Councilmen, (and by virtue of their position we must assume that they are possessed of average intelligence) who would not some time or another have a legitimate difference of opinion upon matters of this kind, unless of course they are subservient to a stronger will. Such 4 to 1 consistency is incredible and it is that very consistency of action which unmistakably indicates that either some one person has dictated their position, or that they are of a stereotyped mentality and unable to truly represent the various elements found in any community.

It is generally conceded that the cause of the other man in the field, George A. Wheeler, is hopeless, and can only have the effect of confusing the issues in the minds of a small percentage of the voters. Whether this situation was deliberately sought or is only a by-product, the results are the same. A vote for Wheeler will be cast at the expense of either one or the other of the stronger candidates and without any benefit to Wheeler. The lines of conflict are sharply drawn. The voters of Daly City desire a change in their administration. Cavagnaro and Fahey will accomplish that change when elected.

PROCRASTINATION HAS FATAL RESULTS

Some time ago our honorable mayor was asked to have stop signs placed at the corners of Hillcrest drive and Santa Barbara avenue and Hillcrest and San Diego avenue and he made the remark that it would cost too much money and he didn't see that those corners required them. But it seems as if we always have to wait till something serious happens before we get remedies.

Last Sunday evening about 5 o'clock there was an auto accident at the corner of Hillcrest and San Diego avenue in which a young girl was killed and others injured. It seems to me that if we can use taxpayers money for our police to ride around and ask people to take their names off of legal petitions, we surely can spend some for a good cause, or do we have to wait until someone else is killed.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

FIRE PREVENTION
(Heaters Continued)

By Chief A. P. Chesney

It is a very good idea whenever possible, to have the furnace section entirely cut off from the rest of the house.

Kitchen ranges not resting on legs should have foundations of brick or cement at least three inches thicks and should stand at least a foot away from any woodwork, unless the latter is protected by asbestos or metal sheathing with an air space between them and the wood, or by both materials, in which case a space of six inch clearance is considered sufficient.

The floor beneath all stoves supported by legs should be protected with sheet metal having a layer of asbestos beneath it and extending about a foot or so in front of the ash receptacle so as to catch any hot coals or sparks that drop out.

The smoke pipe connecting the stove or furnace with the chimney should always enter the chimney horizontally and be tightly sealed with mortar or a metal collar where it enters the chimney and if it is a long stretch should be supported by wires from the ceiling.

San Diego hotels broke all precedents by reducing rates 10 per cent when the 1936 California Pacific International Exposition opened.

KOOTENAY BELLE OUTPUT AVERAGE

Since the 50-ton Hadsel mill of Kootenay Belle Gold Mines was started in November, 1934, up till the end of November, 1935, it has handled 14.380 tons, yielding 5361 ounces of gold, valued at $187,635, and bringing $175,643 to the company's treasury after deduction of freight and smelter charges.

This is an average of 39 tons per day for 372 days, including tuning up period, which consumed several weeks; shut downs for repairs and adjustments; holidays and all other interruptions. Allowing fairly for these unavoidable suspensions, average mill duty has been around 45 tons daily.

Average recovery has been .372 ounces or just over $13 per ton.

Total production of the mine, which shipped crude ore direct to smelter prior to November 22, 1934, has reached $358,201, after deduction of freight and treatment or over $400,000 in gross value.

This achievement, which, considering the size of the operation is among the most successful in recent history of the province, is a tribute to the careful management and unremitting zeal of F. M. Black, managing director, a fact fully recognized by his fellow directors.

Kootenay Belle was the first company in British Columbia to install a Hadsel mill, which features a revolutionary method of primary crushing, and, while troubles incidental to all machinery have been met with from time to time, the experiment has proved eminently successful in the matter of tonnage and costs.

Mr. Black is the oldest operator in the Sheep Creek district, having been responsible for early development of the Mother Lode mine, now part of Reno, and also responsible for sale of that mine to the late John McMartin back in 1914.

At that time Mother Lode-Sheep Creek Mining Company was organized with capital of $1,250,000 in dollar shares, and the present Reno mill, of cyanide type, constructed at a cost of $300,000. At that time it was the most modern and efficient plant in the province.

Much activity in the stock subsequently took place on the New York Curb, but developments were disappointing at depth and with gold at the old price, satisfactory profit was impossible.

The operation was suspended in 1916, giving the district a "black eye," from which it did not recover for many years. The next operations of importance were those of Nugget and the original Reno company, financial largely in Nelson.

CHURCH HAD GREAT WEEK END SERVICES

The week end rally of last week at Grace Church of the Nazarene, corner of Vista and Santa Barbara, was well attended and very inspiring. Le Roy Peck of Watsonville quickly won the favor and confidence of his hearers. The music and song rendered by George Pesana and Miss Roena Farr was greatly enjoyed.

Next Sunday, April 5, will be Palm Sunday. A Communion Service will be held at 11 o'clock, with Rev. Gill speaking on "An Expression of Christ's Agony." Sunday evening's subject will be "Christ Crucified."

You are corlially invited to attend the growing Sunday School, which assembles at 9:45 a. m. each Sunday. You will find the Young People's service at 6:45 p. m. to be very helpful. How different would be life and death if our young people would all remember their Creator in the days of their youth.

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

Another startling fulfillment of Scripture prophecy is seen in the rain-falls of Palestine today. The Holy Land has not been the fertile land it once was. The rain-fall has been only equal to that of other lands. But, according to Joel 2:23, there would again fall the two rains each year—the latter rain and the former rain. Today, the water-pools which supply Jerusalem with water are overflowing for the first time in centuries, and two rains each year are again falling, making the land the fertile valley it was in centuries past.

One more amazing fulfillment is witnessed in the changes of the Dead Sea. Read Isaiah 47, which throws interesting light upon these changes. Not only that great pipe-line being built from Haifa to the oil-fields in the territory taken from Turkey in the World War, but pipe-lines are extending from the Great Sea (Mediteranean) to the Dead Sea, bringing not only water BUT FISH into the Sea which derived it name from its centuries of uselessness.

There is no sense in evading these facts. I might write for pages on the remarkable prophecies which are being fulfilled in Palestine, in the world and in AMERICA. Isaiah tells us something about the Allied planes that flew over Jerusalem in 1918, when the Turks, fearing their power, evacuated the land, and, with not a shell being fired, the Jews went in under Lord Allenby to take back the land of their fathers, and the Written Word was again fulfilled.

PRESIDENT'S STRENGTH STEADILY INCREASING

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

He can't be stopped. The "he" in this declaration heard on all sides these days is just as you are undoubtedly guessing—President Roosevelt. Every hour indications are piling up the present chief executive of our country will come home all by himself in the presidential race next November. And the way time is flying that is not so far away, either.

In The Record several weeks ago I indited a special article commending the President for his advocating of a tax sound in every way, that of a levy on undivided corporation profits. That is one of the broad-minded moves that is increasing his popularity so fast. The youth of the nation, along with the farmers, wage earners and the women, watch closely for a step in the right direction at Washington and almost unanimously those groups have endorsed the liberal proposal on taxation.

Experts of the farsighted kind point out no tax could be devised which would be less likely to alienate the people. Even shareholders, I have noted, are so cheered by the prospect of increased disbursements they are willing to overlook the fact that dividends will be subject, under the Roosevelt scheme, to the normal income tax.

* * *

As clearly demonstrated in an editorial in the Nation recent studies have shown that one of the primary causes of the depression is to be found in the tendency toward oversaving on the part of wealthy individuals and corporations. The situation as to individuals has been handled by progressive income, inheritance and gift levies. The taxation of corporations, however, has not been so wise. The exemption of dividends from the normal tax on individual incomes has been an inducement to directors to retain as large a share of corporation earnings as possible in surplus accounts.

It is clear enough that in the years of the so-called "boom" the surpluses were deposited wtih commercial banks, where they were used to swell brokers' loans, or were invested directly in the money market, where they served to intensify speculative frenzy. Lately the surpluses have stagnated as excess bank reserves and have become a threat to the economic stability of the nation.

The well written editorial concludes with these sage words:

"Although the proposed tax does not eliminate the need for a drastic increase in the inheritance and income levies, it ranks as one of the 'reform' measures of the New Deal which bear the earmarks of forethought and careful preparation."

* * *

One of the leading Republican papers, which naturally never goes out of its way to present President Roosevelt's policies in the proper light, is forced to run the following "head" on a story from Washington:

"Roosevelt Sticking To Guns On Relief"

In the yarn itself it is pointed out that the President plans absolutely no retrenchment whatever in putting the national house in order, which means, above all, giving the opportunity to work to willing hands.

The "chief" proposes a continuation of a huge Federal work-relief program by maintaining the WPA as the base of the relief system.

Every chance in the world is being given to private industry to carry out its vaunted ambition to put the unemployed back to work, thus making unnecessary the carrying out of the comprehensive plans of Uncle Sam. But this must be said: emphasis was given in the President's $1,500,000,000 relief message to the possibility of government control for industry if he is re-elected and private industry fails to provide jobs and the labor standards that he demands of private industry.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." These words from I Timothy comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, April 5, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Unreality." Included among the Scriptual selections will be: "And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day. . . . . But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground . . . . And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. . . . And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 1: 31;2: 6, 8, 16, 17).

The following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Everything good or worthy, God made . . . . The 'tree of knowledge' stands for the erroneous doctrine that the knowledge of evil is as real, hence as God-bestowed, as the knowledge of good" (pp. 525, 526).

NEW CARS ARE NOW IN DEMAND

Now that summer is just a couple of calendar pages away, motorists are becoming actively interested in the new Chrysler convertible coupes and sedans, recently added to the 1936 line, according to the manager of the Mission Auto Company, Chrysler-Plymouth dealer here.

It appears that Walter P. Chrysler, who has pioneered such a host of advances in automobile engineering and construction, has made important improvements in these new convertible models. The local dealer outlined the construction advancement as follows:

"Frequently, the ordinary convertible sedan and coupe type of body is subject to squeaks, rattles, weaving and other objectionable faults because of the difficulty in properly bracing this type of body. However, Chrysler engineers have permanently overcome these annoying conditions in the 1936 Chrysler convertible sedans and coupes, by use of an independent X-type body frame.

"This frame is built into the body itself, and is entirely independent of the chassis frame to which it is bolted. It gives the car a frame over ten inches deep in the central section, which was previously the weak point in convertible bodies. In addition to the X-type frame, heavy cross members support and brace the body at points of greatest stress.

"Consequently, Chrysler convertible sedans and coupes are as permanently rigid and stable as bodies of the closed sedan type. The extra frame overcomes the weakness of all previous convertibles, namely, that they were mounted directly on the chassis frame with nothing to support them or give them rigidity but their own body panels."

How Are Your Brakes?

Do you know that with good brakes it will take you 80 feet to stop your car from a speed of 30 miles an hour?

You will travel 33 feet before you even step on the pedal at all, if your reaction time is normal, and 47 feet after you bring your foot down.

At 40 miles an hour you will need 128 feet to stop, and at 50 miles, 186 feet. If your brakes don't hold evenly or quickly enough, have them checked. And even if they seem all right, have them inspected periodically anyway.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE

To all Fraternal and other organizations in Daly City and Colma:

The trustees of the Widows and Orphans Association of the Daly City Fire Department have selected Saturday evening, May 9, 1936, as the date to hold their annual dance.

Please aid this worthy cause by leaving this date open and refraining from giving any dance, whist party or other entertainment for this evening.

Thank you!

WHAT TO DO IN CASE OF AN ACCIDENT

It is the duty of every civic-minded person to do everything humanly possible to prevent accidents. In case of an accident, it is well to know how to cope with the situation.

First, give necessary aid to any injured person and if the injury is serious, have someone call an ambulance or doctor.

Second, get all essential information in writing: names and addresses of all witnesses and injured persons; license number of vehicles and drivers involved, and the location and time of the accident.

Third, be courteous; but regardless of the circumstances, make no promise of adjustment or admission of fault.

Fourth, report every accident, no matter how trivial, to the police.

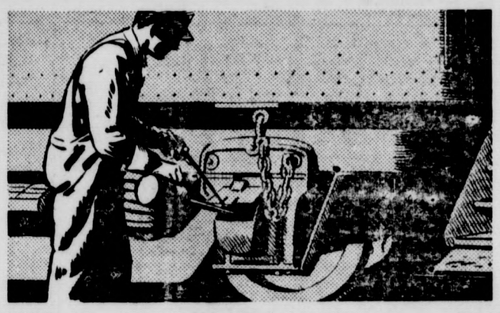
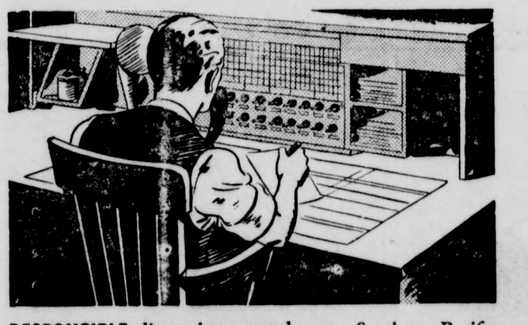
Behind the scenes of your SAFE TRIP

"CLEAR" says the engineer. "Clear" says the fireman, as two pairs of keen eyes check the block signals. Southern Pacific enginemen win the right to operate passenger trains only after many years of experience. Automatic block signals guard every mile of our main line track, warn enginemen of any defects or obstructions.

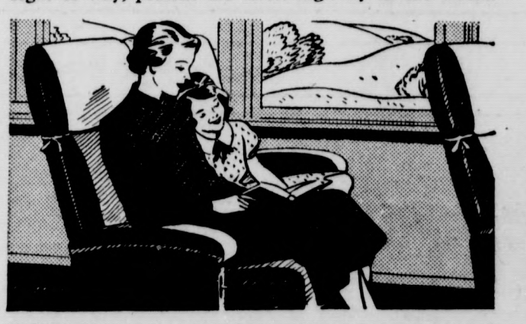


BUILT for safety, Southern Pacific's big steel cars afford a world of protection at all times. Every working part is frequently inspected and tested, kept in perfect running order. No train ever leaves its terminal until all cars and the locomotive are thoroughly tested by skilled workmen, whose creed is "Safety First."

ALL main tracks are regularly patrolled and carefully examined by competent inspectors. In stormy weather watchmen are stationed at many points by day and by night, and tracks are inspected before passage of all trains. Heavy steel rails, securely anchored on their own private right of way, present the safest highway in the world.



RESPONSIBLE dispatchers guard every Southern Pacific train movement. These men — like the enginemen and trainmen — are experts in their line, qualified by years of practical railroad experience. They know each train's position at all times, and flash their orders by telephone and telegraph to alert ears all along the line.



IT'S SAFER on the train than at home. Last year not a single passenger lost his life in a train accident on any railroad in the United States — a new world's record! When you travel on a Southern Pacific train, you sacrifice none of the comforts of good living.

Next time, try the train

Here are a few examples of the very low fares now in effect on Southern Pacific:

	One Way	Roundtrip
LOS ANGELES . .	$9.47	$14
PORTLAND	12.00	20

—in coaches and chair cars, also in tourist sleeping cars, plus very small berth charge. Fares good in standard Pullmans are slightly higher.

	One Way	Roundtrip
CHICAGO	$34.50	$62.20

—in air-conditioned coaches and chair cars on our fastest trains. Low fares in tourist sleeping cars and standard Pullmans, too.

For Example

The case before the court had been going on for many days, and concerned a claim that involved wearisome technicalities. Things were not improved when a counsel made a speech of unnecessary length. He said:

"Then, my lord, comes the question of bags; they might have been full bags or half-full bags; or, again, my lord, they might have been empty bags."

"Or," interrupted the sorely tried judge, "they might have been windbags."

Easily Adjusted

Screeves had written a play, and it was his first. Incidentally at the same time it was the worst thing his friend the producer had read for some years.

"Sorry, my boy," remarked the producer, "but-er I couldn't do this—it's too long for the stage."

"But, I say," expostulated Screeves, 'surely a little thing like that could be fixed up—couldn't you lengthen the stage a bit?"

Small Can Be Great in Bettering of Humanity

When a small nation accomplishes something with its limited means, says ex-President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia in Karel Capek's "President Masaryk Tells His Story," what it achieves has an immense and exceptional value, like the widow's mite. Speaking of his country, Masaryk writes, "Our smallness as a nation does not matter; it even has its advantages; we can know each other better, we can live more intimately; we can feel more at home. But it is a great thing when a small nation among great ones does not get left behind, but takes its share in the work of bettering humanity."

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.
